Bye-Bye Binky By Brigitte Weninger

Nora is a big girl now, but she still clings to her pacifier when she gets sleepy. One day it falls out of her pocket while she's playing outside. Ella Elephant doesn't know what it is, but she thinks it'll make a beautiful ring for her trunk. When she too loses it, Lotti Lamb finds it and thinks it'll make a nice hair clip. One by one different animals find the binky and put it to different uses, only to lose it again. And just when Nora finally finds it, she realizes that maybe she doesn't need it anymore. Here is a cute, funny look at what it means to put aside baby things, and will serve as a help to all those parents hoping to say bye-bye to that binky!

Editorial Review

From School Library Journal

PreS–Nora, a young kitty, doesn't need her Binky anymore, but she still relies on it for comfort now and then. When she loses it, Ella Elephant finds it and uses it as a ring for her trunk. This pattern continues with Nora's other toy friends using the pacifier as a hair clip, a swing, and even a catapult. When she realizes that it is missing, she institutes a search. Together they discover the beat-up object, with each pal claiming it. Nora admits it is her Binky, but she finds that she literally can let it go, tied to the end of a helium balloon. Yonezu and Weninger have done a rare thing by creating a book about pacifiers that is fun. The full-page cartoonlike paintings in bright colors, with the Binky featured close up, are appealing, and the story is predictably reassuring. Children will appreciate this title's simple playfulness, and parents will value its supportive tone.—Rachel G. Payne, Brooklyn Public Library, NY
