

National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education)

From Information Age Publishing

Download now

Read Online →

National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) From Information Age Publishing

A volume in International Review of History Education Series Editor Peter Lee, Rosalyn Ashby, Stuart Foster As educators in the United States and Europe develop national history standards for K-12 students, the question of what to do with national history canons is a subject of growing concern. Should national canons still be the foundation for the teaching of history? Do national canons develop citizenship or should they be modified to accommodate the new realities of globalization? Or should they even be discarded outright? These questions become blurred by the debates over preserving national heritages, by so-called 'history wars' or 'culture wars,' and by debates over which pedagogical frameworks to use. These canon and pedagogical debates often overlap, creating even more confusion. A misconceived "skills vs. content" debate often results. Teaching students to think chronologically and historically is not the same as teaching a national heritage or a cosmopolitan outlook. But what exactly is the difference? Policy-makers and opinion leaders often confuse the pedagogical desirability of using a 'framework' for studying history with their own efforts to reaffirm the centrality of national identity rooted in a vision of their nation's history as a way of inculcating citizenship and patriotism. These are the issues discussed in this volume." Today's students are citizens of the world and must be taught to think in global, supranational terms. At the same time, the traditionalists have a point when they argue that the ideal of the nation-state is the cultural glue that has traditionally held society together, and that social cohesion depends on creating and inculcating a common national culture in the schools. From an educational perspective, the problem is how to teach chronological thinking at all. How are we to reconcile the social, political and intellectual realities of a globalizing world with the continuing need for individuals to function locally as citizens of a nation-state, who share a common past, a common culture, and a common political destiny? Is it a duty of history education to create a frame of reference, and if so, what kind of frame of reference should this be? How does frame-of-reference knowledge relate to canonical knowledge and the body of knowledge of history as a whole?

 Download National History Standards: The Problem of the Can ...pdf

 Read Online National History Standards: The Problem of the C ...pdf

National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education)

From Information Age Publishing

National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) From Information Age Publishing

A volume in International Review of History Education Series Editor Peter Lee, Rosalyn Ashby, Stuart Foster As educators in the United States and Europe develop national history standards for K-12 students, the question of what to do with national history canons is a subject of growing concern. Should national canons still be the foundation for the teaching of history? Do national canons develop citizenship or should they be modified to accommodate the new realities of globalization? Or should they even be discarded outright? These questions become blurred by the debates over preserving national heritages, by so-called 'history wars' or 'culture wars,' and by debates over which pedagogical frameworks to use. These canon and pedagogical debates often overlap, creating even more confusion. A misconceived "skills vs. content" debate often results. Teaching students to think chronologically and historically is not the same as teaching a national heritage or a cosmopolitan outlook. But what exactly is the difference? Policy-makers and opinion leaders often confuse the pedagogical desirability of using a 'framework' for studying history with their own efforts to reaffirm the centrality of national identity rooted in a vision of their nation's history as a way of inculcating citizenship and patriotism. These are the issues discussed in this volume." Today's students are citizens of the world and must be taught to think in global, supranational terms. At the same time, the traditionalists have a point when they argue that the ideal of the nation-state is the cultural glue that has traditionally held society together, and that social cohesion depends on creating and inculcating a common national culture in the schools. From an educational perspective, the problem is how to teach chronological thinking at all. How are we to reconcile the social, political and intellectual realities of a globalizing world with the continuing need for individuals to function locally as citizens of a nation-state, who share a common past, a common culture, and a common political destiny? Is it a duty of history education to create a frame of reference, and if so, what kind of frame of reference should this be? How does frame-of-reference knowledge relate to canonical knowledge and the body of knowledge of history as a whole?

National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) From Information Age Publishing Bibliography

- Sales Rank: #4563776 in Books
- Published on: 2009-04-01
- Released on: 2009-04-01
- Original language: English
- Number of items: 1
- Dimensions: 9.21" h x .75" w x 6.14" l, 1.03 pounds
- Binding: Paperback
- 332 pages

 Download National History Standards: The Problem of the Can ...pdf

 Read Online National History Standards: The Problem of the C ...pdf

Download and Read Free Online National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) From Information Age Publishing

Editorial Review

Review

"Nothing can better serve the promotion of a deeply humanistic but analytic history in precollegiate classrooms than discourse among an internationally diverse body of reform-minded history educators. This book delivers just that. The essays in National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History, by leading history educators on both sides of the Atlantic, offer cogent critiques of the tangled reform efforts on how history should be taught in the schools as well as sophisticated models for constructing both national and trans-national history for the young people who will determine the course of twenty-first-century human affairs." Gary B. Nash, Director, National Center for History in the Schools, UCLA"

About the Author

"Nothing can better serve the promotion of a deeply humanistic but analytic history in precollegiate classrooms than discourse among an internationally diverse body of reform-minded history educators. This book delivers just that. The essays in National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History, by leading history educators on both sides of the Atlantic, offer cogent critiques of the tangled reform efforts on how history should be taught in the schools as well as sophisticated models for constructing both national and trans-national history for the young people who will determine the course of twenty-first-century human affairs." Gary B. Nash, Director, National Center for History in the Schools, UCLA

Users Review

From reader reviews:

Terrance Hutchins:

This National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) are generally reliable for you who want to become a successful person, why. The reason of this National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) can be one of many great books you must have will be giving you more than just simple studying food but feed you with information that might be will shock your before knowledge. This book is handy, you can bring it almost everywhere and whenever your conditions at e-book and printed ones. Beside that this National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) forcing you to have an enormous of experience for instance rich vocabulary, giving you demo of critical thinking that we understand it useful in your day action. So , let's have it and revel in reading.

John Davis:

Your reading 6th sense will not betray anyone, why because this National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) reserve written by well-known writer we are excited for well how to make book that may be understand by anyone who also read the book. Written within good manner for you, dripping every ideas and creating skill only for eliminate your hunger then you still doubt National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) as good book not simply by the cover but also with the content. This is one guide that can break don't judge book by its handle, so do you still needing yet another sixth sense to pick this particular!? Oh come on your reading through sixth sense already said so why you have to listening to a different sixth sense.

Bernard Lewis:

Are you kind of stressful person, only have 10 as well as 15 minute in your morning to upgrading your mind expertise or thinking skill possibly analytical thinking? Then you are having problem with the book when compared with can satisfy your limited time to read it because all this time you only find book that need more time to be read. National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) can be your answer given it can be read by you actually who have those short time problems.

Ernestine Biggs:

This National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) is completely new way for you who has attention to look for some information given it relief your hunger associated with. Getting deeper you onto it getting knowledge more you know otherwise you who still having small amount of digest in reading this National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) can be the light food for you because the information inside this particular book is easy to get by anyone. These books produce itself in the form and that is reachable by anyone, yeah I mean in the e-book application form. People who think that in publication form make them feel drowsy even dizzy this book is the answer. So there isn't any in reading a reserve especially this one. You can find actually looking for. It should be here for a person. So , don't miss the item! Just read this e-book type for your better life and knowledge.

Download and Read Online National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) From Information Age Publishing #CYT4Q0BF2U3

Read National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) From Information Age Publishing for online ebook

National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) From Information Age Publishing Free PDF d0wnl0ad, audio books, books to read, good books to read, cheap books, good books, online books, books online, book reviews epub, read books online, books to read online, online library, greatbooks to read, PDF best books to read, top books to read National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) From Information Age Publishing books to read online.

Online National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) From Information Age Publishing ebook PDF download

National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) From Information Age Publishing Doc

National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) From Information Age Publishing Mobipocket

National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) From Information Age Publishing EPub

CYT4Q0BF2U3: National History Standards: The Problem of the Canon and the Future of Teaching History (International Review of History Education) From Information Age Publishing